Message to Prospective Applicants for Doctoral Program in Medical Science

The purpose of this program is to foster world-leading researchers and educators in the medical sciences who can venture beyond the traditional medical education and research framework. The program brings together individuals with demonstrated academic achievements in the natural sciences and engineering, and trains them in the various aspects of medicine. The curriculum is therefore designed to provide both specialized medical knowledge and advanced communication skills. In addition, the program aims to develop individuals with high ethical standards and leadership skills who can guide the next generation of researchers.

We therefore welcome students who are enthusiastic to make significant contributions to the world of medical science. In the entrance examination, applicants are required to provide evidence of their English proficiency, and to present their prospective research plan during the interview so that their ability to plan, conduct and describe their research can be evaluated.
